The North-Fire.

It sat and mused before the open fire.

And watch the fiery flames dance in glee.

They were their slender arms right merrily

And with their merriment their bright attire.

"We are the sunbeams, hidden in this tree

Long, long ago. The thought we are free

With pantomime to please thee we desire."

"To tell me also, happy, winsome sprite,

That smiles and cheering words of bygone days,

Soul-embodies, yet unheeded as our breath,

May come to us again in darkest night.

From memory's treasure-house, and visions raise

To warm and quicken faith that wavereth."

—Frederick L. Sargent, in Youth's Companion.

OLD CLOTHES.

"For once I've been made a fool of,"

and Mr. Pattiphan, just before he went out to breakfast one morning. "I've been made a fool of, and I no more know from whom than I know the Koran.

And what is more, added Mr. Pattiphan,

"I shall offer it to some one if I can't get it out of my head, and get into difficulties. I'll leave it here."

He put it into the china bowl full of visiting cards that stood on a table in the corner of his wife's parlor as he spoke, kissed her, and took his way to those regions vaguely spoken of as

"down-town," and Mr. Pattiphan looked at the counterpane, and in water that she might not make some mistake herself to it across the middle before throwing it back into the china bowl.

"Mr. Pattiphan never observed anything," she said to herself. "His organs of reflection are large, but his

RAIN FROM A BLUE SKY.

Rain can fall from a cloudless sky.

This thing is known in France known as "seren." As the atmosphere looks quite clear when it falls, the probability is all in favor of the moisture having been brought by the wind at a great elevation. In the island of Mauritius the phenomenon is by no means uncommon during the prevalence of southeast winds, slight showers falling in discreet evenings when the stars are shining brilliantly. There the rain is thought to be due to invisible vapor in the upper reaches of the atmosphere, being condensed at once and falling in drops without passing through the intermediate stage of cloud. Sir John C. Ross stated that in the south Atlantic he had seen a shower of rain fall from the clouds. "The night was clear," says the Genoa naturalist,

"the stars were shining with their customed brilliancy, when a shower of rain, consisting of large lukewarm drops, fell during six minutes upon the town." A similar view was once observed at Constantinople, in Algeria, about noon, the sky being all the time a splendid blue; and in England frequently drops of rain, forming a very sight shower, have been known to fall when there were no clouds visible except near the horizon. Some believe that these showers are the result of particles of ice formed in the higher regions melting and falling, while others attribute them to currents of warm and cold air traveling in opposite directions,

with the result that the latter condenses

POK PARK AND GARDEN.

PROFITS IN GREEN.

Generally speaking, a flock of geese,

properly managed, will pay the farmer

a good profit, and it is a source of wonder to me, says A. F. Hunter in the New England Farmer, that so few of the farmers who have or can have the water privileges, keep geese. Geese are hardy, require but cheap shelter, and for a good part of the year will obtain nearly all their living.

BUTTER FROM SWEET CREAM.

For the benefit of those who want to try the market with butter made from sweet cream allow us to suggest that the butter be sent to the commission merchant without the slightest hesitation. Let him have it as it is and sell it for what it is, and then if he praises or condemns it you can act accordingly, but do not tell him how it is made provided it pleases him, for then he will begin to look for faults under an old prejudice. What should tell the tale is the price the butter brings provided no delays or accidents happened to the butter. —American Dairyman.

CUTTING HAY FOR SHEEP.

The sheep is a more dainty feeder than the other farm animal, and if fed whole hay will inevitably get some of it soiled and leave it uneaten. It is found that by feeding twenty-five medium sheep fifty pounds of early cut timothy hay, they left twenty pounds uneaten. When the allowance was increased to seventy-five pounds they left fifteen pounds uneaten. When the hay was cut to three-eighths of an

THE OLD WHITE PINE.

Far to the north in the trackless wild

A grand old pine tree stood,

Towering aloft in its majesty.

The monarch of the wood

Through all the storms of the centuries years.

It proudly reared its head

High o'er the ranks of its kindred near

When forest fires lay dead.

Deep in the heart of the wilderness

To mankind all unknown.

Safe from the ax of the lumberman

For ages it had grown.

At last one day through the forest came

Out the busy mart.

The monarch's reign was o'er.

Straight to the core of the patriarch

The keen-edged blades were sent.

And prone to march with a mighty roar

The giant crashing went.

Then of the huge weather-beaten limbs

The protestant trunk was shorn.

And to the mill by the rapid stream

Its severed lengths were borne.

Forth to the world went the woodland king

Rent in a thousand parts.

Home from his home in the northern wood

Part went to form a laborer's cot,

Part framed a mansion fine.

And many things of the good of man

Came from the old white pine.

—Frank B. Welch in Detroit Free Press.

"There is nothing in it."
The man that sells you lamp-chimneys may, or may not, know the difference—some are made of brittle glass, and some are made of tough glass. The tough ones cost the maker two or three times as much as the brittle ones. That accounts for the breaking of chimneys.
The making of tough glass chimneys is almost confined to one firm, Macbeth & Co., Pittsburgh. "Pearl-top" is the trade mark.

White Awake for April opens with a burst of "Easter offerings," embracing the spirit of youth and bloom and gladness, with the beautiful story, "The Pilgrim's Easter Lily," which is a story of the life of a young man, who, after a long and arduous journey, finds himself in a beautiful land, where he meets a young woman, who is the daughter of a king. They fall in love, and are married, and live happily ever after. The story is told in a simple and straightforward manner, and is very interesting. It is a good story for young people to read, and will give them a good idea of the life of a young man, who is trying to make his way in the world. It is sold by all druggists, and is very cheap. E. ODD FELLOWS BUILDING.

The new home of Crescent Lodge No. 82, I. O. O. F., is completed, and last evening was formally dedicated to the principles of FRATERNITY, LOVE AND TRUTH, by Grand Master EDWARD H. KENNEDY, of the Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F. of Massachusetts. It was an occasion that in years to come will be recalled with pleasure by the large number of brothers and ladies present, and was purely an Odd Fellow gathering, no gentlemen not members of the Order being present.
Crescent Lodge, which is now in its 45th year of institution, has long felt the need of a home of its own, and has several times taken steps to erect a building; but for various reasons the project has been delayed until two years ago, when again a committee was appointed to see what could be done toward the erection of a building, and how well this committee fulfilled the duty for which they were appointed the present imposing edifice on the corner of Commercial and Cottage streets, in East Weymouth, will testify.
The work of clearing the lot for the foundations was commenced last summer by J. F. & W. H. Cushing, and soon after the contractors, Messrs. Isaac H. Cushing & Son, of Hingham, began their part of the work. A beautiful cornerstone, designed and furnished by brother John Kelly, proprietor of the Weymouth Monumental Works, was soon placed in position, and work on the building was then rapidly forwarded, until now the building is ready to be dedicated, and the committee have done save the painting of the exterior.
Before entering into an account of the dedication ceremonies a description of the building and furnishings will not be amiss. The building, which was designed by Mr. Elijah H. Cushing, a member of the above firm of contractors, is of the colonial style of architecture. The dimensions are 20x28 feet, with a projection 18x22 on the front, for a stairway, and an extension on the rear, 18x24, for the stage. The first floor and basement front on Commercial street, the entrance to this floor being from that street. On either side of this entrance there is a room 12x20, which will be used as waiting-room and kitchen. On this floor there is also the banquet room, 40x20, with a store room under the stage, in which is located the apparatus for lighting the building, and on one side of the banquet room is located the boiler by which the building is heated. Two stairways lead from this floor to the floor above, one at the rear, leading back of the stage, and one at the front, leading to the public hall, or as it is called, the Opera House. This hall is 20x20, and is lighted by two large chandeliers of sixteen branches each, besides numerous side lights, and is provided with patent folding chairs, the seating capacity being about 600, the chairs being furnished by Messrs. Ford & Phillips, furniture dealers at East Weymouth. There is also a stage 22 feet square, with dressing rooms at either side. Stage, the well known scenic artist, has fitted the stage with several sets of scenery, and it is also provided with foot and border lights. Besides the main entrance another has been placed near the stage, which can readily be used in case of fire or panic, both entering from Cottage street.
The main entrance, which is enclosed by an ample porch, leads into a noisy vestibule, which has been provided with ticket office. Upon one side of this vestibule is a large marble slab, inscribed as follows:
ERECTED BY
CRESCENT LODGE HALL ASSOCIATION.
1880.
Committee: James A. Boory, Franklin D. Thayer, Hiram E. Raymond, John F. Cushing, Francis George, John P. Cushing, Architect and Builder, E. H. Cushing.
Directly in front of the entrance a broad stairway leads to the third floor, where are the lodge room, ante-room and small hall. The two ante-rooms are 15 feet square, the lodge room 22x28, and the small hall 25 feet square. From the first ante-room a door to the right leads to the ladies dressing room; a door to the left leads to a small hall, which has been fitted for the officers, with nice carpets, pedestals and stuffed chairs, and is lighted by an eight burner chandelier. Directly in front of a door leads to the second ante-room, which has been fitted with a dark Brussels carpet. An electric bell is placed over the entrance door, to call the attention of the members to business. Over the door vestibule is the large room is the All-Seeing Eye, enveloped in a blaze of light.
Entering the lodge room, the success of the furnishing committee, brother William T. Rice, Wendell T. Rice, John P. Cushing and Edward A. French, becomes apparent. The first sinks into a luxurious 5-frame Brussels carpet, bordered by an elegant design two feet wide, the whole very attractive pattern. Messrs. Thomas O'Callaghan & Co., of Boston, were the contractors for the carpeting. In the centre of the room a large bayonet case denotes the place of address, and standing upon this and looking around the beauties of the room become visible. The canopy over the Noble Grand's chair is of scarlet silk damask, 12 feet high, 6 feet deep and 8 feet wide. On either side of the room the appropriate officers stations are backed by a drape and scarf, one of blue, one of drab and one of purple, each officer having before him a pedestal of quartered oak, of medium antique design and highly polished. Each is provided with a gas jet, Noble Grand's also having an electric light. The officers chairs are in triplicate for the Noble Grand and Vice Grand, the remaining chairs being single armchairs, upholstered in scarlet and blue crushed mohair plush, each being provided with a neat table for the headrest. The settees around the room are raised on a four inch platform and are of the same material and design as the chairs, and are upholstered with scarlet plush. Each secretary's desk is of similar design and material as the rest of the furniture, one being a single, the other a double desk, with a revolving easy chair for each officer. On the right of the room near the Vice Grand's station, is the organ and a table upon which is an album containing the portraits of the members, as far as obtainable. On the walls are hung the charters of Crescent Lodge, a compact, an Enactment and Compromise of 1786. The furniture was made by S. C. Small & Co., of Boston, from special designs from the hands of E. P. M. Maxwell.
Looking upward a most beautiful sight meets the eye. On the four sides of the ceiling, interwoven in the scroll work, are the names of the members of the lodge, by which the members are bound together in Friendship, Love and Truth. In the four corners are the Bundles of Sticks, representing the axiom "In union is strength"; the Bow and Arrow, reminder of the covenant made between David and Jonathan; the chalice, symbolizing the foundation of truth; the scepter, betokening that as the grass fades before the mower's scythe so we too, fall before the touch of time; the Hour Glass, symbolic of the flight of time; and the Ark, the repository of the tables of the Decalogue, guarded by two cherubim, with flaming swords.
To the artist, H. Stephens, highest compliment is due, for under his skillful touch the aspect of the room has been made one of beauty and grandeur. To the ladies of the F. L. T. Circle the lodge are greatly indebted, for by their aid they were enabled to furnish the lodge room in so beautiful a manner.

Leading from the lodge room there are two parlor-halls. The fourth floor is the roomy attic, which is at present unused. The building is supplied with hot water and all the modern sanitary conveniences. The work on the building fully sustains the established reputation of the contractors.
